Subject:	CHIRP out of date, or is it?
Description
Sorry if I am not following this sites protocol. I am new here and if this is not allowed, please delete, or forward to the correct person/thread. I have encountered a problem that may be minor, but seems enough to warrant some special attention. Last week, I downloaded the CHIRP program for the 1st time ever. I used it, cloned several of my new radios, and restarted them, and shut them off since they seemed all ready to go. Well, today, 7 days later, I tried to start the program, and a message came up saying I was out of date again and to download it from the same site I did it from before. I got the original from: https://trac.chirp.danplanet.com/chirp_daily/LATEST/ I thought CHIRP had recently updated so I downloaded it again. Thinking all went well, I load the CHIRP program and it tells me my version is not up to date all over again. Per the website, I did not delete the old one and then reinstall. Now I have an issue with the program NOT updating properly. NOTE: the attached image showing "CHIRP daily-20190817" is what version it still says I have, when I know there is a newer number "20190824" available. I do believe the current setup is flawed and requires updating before it is released. Also, Since I am not a programmer, nor am I tech savy enough to attempt to correct this issue, I do have a suggestion. If I can make a reasonable suggestion: Have a button, or a way to simply download from inside the program itself, that would be extremely helpful.

- Status changed from New to Closed

You cannot update Chirp while it's currently running. So, if you decide to get a fresh version, close the currently running one first.
